

Modern times call for contemporary design - ideas that breathe in the times in which we live in... and breathe out fresh, bold concepts.

When past clients returned to Naples-based designer Jenny Provost for help with the elevator foyer for their exclusive Bal Harbour residence, they came looking for fearless design and unconventional storage space. Having already designed and installed ornate wrought iron morning glories in their Washington, DC home, they asked for a repeat performance, in a tropical locale. Aluminum and resin coral wall art created by a local artist offers a striking backdrop for red panels hiding storage space for everything from beach gear to folding chairs. >>

A water feature of flowers is the focus of a Florida foyer. Once the complex pattern was designed, it was installed as an arc-lit, continuous waterfall.

Part office, part flex space, this room covers the spread through a clever dual-purpose desk. Inspired by the very icon of modernity – the bar code – it can accommodate two people at work or be transformed into additional dining space.

An ocean front condo's masculine, seagoing themed bathroom with porthole lights has a pop of color in the Miami Dolphins-turquoise sink, repeated in the adjacent games room (inset), which converts into a children's spare room.
